

I use my XM every day. You might like to know why, it's simple, you get what you pay for and I think the people who feel they are losing something by me listening to satellite radio are failing to understand the market - I stopped listening to the lowband broadcasting years ago because they did not meet my needs or desires. Did they change the programming, no, so I changed my programming and tuned them out. It would be a mistake to allow them to infect this new media transport as they have the old. To allow them to rule this market will not protect their investments nor garner them any more revenue and will certainly cost you votes. I believe in old fashioned capitalism - you pay for the services you want from who ever you choose.
